To whom it may concern

Screen Producers Australia (SPA) is the peak business and trade association for the Australian film and television industry. SPA was formed over 60 years ago to represent the interests of independent producers. SPA has nearly 500 members, who are small to medium sized businesses that together generated in 2017 over $1.2 billion in economic activity and supported 20,000 jobs.

In addition to previous submissions SPA has made to the Australian Law Reform Commission and the Productivity Commission relating to copyright exceptions and various roundtables convened by the Department, in relation to the discussion paper, Screen Producers Australia has read and supports the submission of the Australian Copyright Council.
